Iraq: Animal Health Export Restrictions for U.S. Food Products Intended for Human Consumption

Last Modified:

This page lists animal health-related export restrictions on U.S. animal products intended for human consumption. Export certification for these products is coordinated among multiple Federal agencies.

While APHIS attests to the animal health status of the region of origin (such as a U.S. State, county, or town), other Federal agencies, such as USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service and Agricultural Marketing Service, endorse and issue the export certificates.

Products listed on this page may also be subject to additional entry requirements imposed by USDA or other Federal agencies. Exporters are encouraged to consult all relevant authorities to ensure full compliance.

Poultry and Poultry Products

Restrictions apply to poultry and poultry products derived from birds originating from the affected areas during the dates indicated below.

These products are ineligible for export to Iraq.
